Coming Face to Face with Endangered Sea Turtles

It's easy to feel intimidated by a sea turtle. The creatures can be huge, with green turtles in particular weighing up to 400 pounds. If you're an amateur snorkeler, you may panic when one swims toward you, says underwater photographer David Fleetham, who took the photograph of a green sea turtle that appears on the new Protect Sea Turtles stamp pane.

But Fleetham says that once you get used to their size, watching sea turtles from a respectful distance teaches you to recognize their distinctive personalities.

"Each one is its own different character," he says. "You can't say, 'Oh, green sea turtles act like this,' because some do and some don't. They're definitely individuals."

Emphasizing the uniqueness of these special animals was also a goal for stamp art director Derry Noyes, who wanted these stamps to swim with a rich array of textures, colors, and shapes, like the ocean itself. This meant that in addition to close-up turtle portraits like Fleetham's, she included other views of the majestic creatures, like the shot of the hawksbill gliding through the frame at a diagonal.

Still, most of the stamps emphasize sea turtle faces. Noyes made this decision not only to suggest a range of turtle personalities, but also to emphasize the animals' vulnerability.

"If you see a sea turtle close up, you see that they're harmless and they're quite fetching," she says. "You see how benign these creatures are and how they really don't deserve to be harmed." ■

Celebrating the Bond Between Humans and Horses

Horses have been an integral part of the American story for centuries. While they used to fulfill more practical purposes, such as in agriculture or transportation, today, most horses live out their lives simply as our beloved companions. This intimate relationship was what art director Derry Noyes hoped to capture in the Horses Forever® stamps.

“We’ve done horses in the past [on stamps], mostly formally,” she says. “I wanted this new set to be more as your pet — informal portraits out in a field or a barn. And I chose to use photography because we’d illustrated horses in the past. This was also to appeal to a different population — those who actually own horses or who, like me, went to summer camp to ride their hearts out because their parents couldn’t afford a horse.”

Once she’d settled on photography and portraiture, Noyes looked for variety. She created the stamp art from the existing work of two photographers: Stephanie Moon and Karen Wegehenkel. “I did not focus on breeds but on different colors,” she explains. “Some looking at you, some looking sideways.”

Noyes paid attention to variety in the backgrounds too: different enough to be interesting but not jarring from stamp to stamp, with backgrounds that allowed each horse to stand out clearly.

The end result is a stamp issuance that captures the spirit and loyalty of these wondrous creatures, commemorating the special bond that people and their equine companions share. ■

Leaving Their Mark on History: Ten Heroes of the Underground Railroad

Leaving Their Mark on History:
Ten Heroes of the Underground Railroad

484625 / $43.95

Comes with 7 progressive stamp proofs, the final The Underground Railroad Forever® stamps in a mint pane of 20, and an original 8" x 10" art print.

Inside is a timeline of key events in the years leading up to emancipation, a map of escape routes, and a brief biography of each of the 10 brave individuals featured on these stamps.

Commemorating a Pivotal Moment in American History

Offered alongside The Underground Railroad stamp issuance is a unique product, “Leaving Their Mark on History: Ten Heroes of the Underground Railroad,” that conveys the rich history behind the issuance.

Designer Lamont Sandridge remarked that in terms of production technique, there is no other U.S. Postal Service product like it. What appears at first glance to be a traditional booklet expands to an impressive 38 inches. “We wanted the reader to have a dual experience with this product,” Sandridge says. They can both dive into biographies of the individuals featured on the stamps and unfurl the booklet to explore key events in the years leading up to emancipation. The spread also includes a map showing generally where freedom seekers traveled.

The booklet design was inspired by the art direction for the stamp — making use of block lettering similar to 19th-century wooden type. The “Behind the Design” section also digs into the background of why art director Antonio Alcalá chose each word that appears on the stamps.

Along with the booklet, progressive stamp proofs, and a mint pane of 20 stamps, the product comes with a custom 8” x 10” art print. Printed on sturdy cardstock, and with a striking design, it’s a piece worthy of wall space. Sandridge, who also designed this art print, reflected on the intention behind the direction: “We wanted to portray how the landscape affected not only these 10 individuals, but also the thousands of others who were a part of the Underground Railroad.”

Grounded by the North Star in the upper right-hand corner, the abstract landscape invites viewers to add their own interpretation while considering the treacherous flight to freedom that so many undertook. Sandridge concluded, “We thought that the North Star was essential. We included it as a symbol of hope.” ■

A self-supporting government enterprise, the U.S. Postal Service is the only delivery service that reaches every address in the nation: more than 161 million residences, businesses, and Post Office™ boxes. The Postal Service generally receives no direct support from taxpayers for its operations. With more than 31,000 retail offices (not including contract offices) and one of the most frequently visited websites of the federal government, the Postal Service relies on the sale of postage, products, and services to pay for operating expenses.

The process of creating stamps, part 1

Every year, new stamps celebrate uniquely American subjects. But why are some subjects chosen and others not? And what does that process look like?

Some 15,000 stamp suggestions pour in annually from the public, via the U.S. mail, using a stamp. (That is one of several requirements for recommending a stamp subject.) Each receives a response. A published list of general criteria winnows down that number considerably.

For example, “A lot of people write in about very important people who are doing important things, and they want to honor them,” says Claudia Daniels, copywriter and researcher in USPS Stamp Development. “The person may absolutely deserve the honor. Yet selection criteria require that a person be deceased for at least three years before appearing on a stamp. That’s often what people miss.”

After that first cut, the Citizens’ Stamp Advisory Committee (CSAC) weighs in at quarterly meetings on a smaller set of suggested subjects. Noteworthy are the specialties of CSAC members — from art, design, and history to sports, technology, and Americana — that now come into play.

As the committee prepares its final 20-25 recommended stamp subjects for approval by the Postmaster General, they’re looking to mark anniversaries and to find balance between topics such as science, arts, history, and culture. “CSAC is the voice of the American public,” Daniels says. “And their different backgrounds and expertise are reflected in the diversity offered in each year’s stamp program.”

CSAC meetings rely on confidentiality and a democratic process. Not only are final votes anonymous, but each suggested topic also comes to the committee without bias. “CSAC does not know whether there are 10,000 letters supporting a subject, or just one,” Daniels says — “or whether a congressman recommended a subject or my grandmother. That way, all subjects have equal consideration.”

“We want to highlight what’s great about America,” says Joe Kelley, current chair of CSAC and an avid stamp collector. “The hope is to not only draw more people to the hobby of stamp collecting, but also encourage people to simply use stamps. With so much emphasis today on the popularity of all things ‘retro,’” Kelley says, “why not be retro yourself and write a letter?” ■
