

Christian Libertarian Review

2023 Call for Papers

The Christian Libertarian Review (CLR) is an open-access academic publication founded in 2017 by the Libertarian Christian Institute, a 501c3 nonprofit dedicated to equipping Christians to promote a free society. The purpose of the CLR is to foster intellectual dialogue, exploration, and research surrounding the relationship between Christianity and libertarian thought. As an interdisciplinary journal, contributions span into fields of philosophy, political theory, theology, ethics, law, economics, anthropology, history, social studies, foreign affairs, and similar disciplines.

CLR is now accepting submissions for its 2023 volume. All papers must be submitted via the Scholastica platform. Submission is free of charge, and papers are accepted on a rolling basis. Volumes for CLR now follow calendar years, and print editions will be made available for purchase from time to time consisting of at least one Volume. Accepted papers are released as soon as possible on Scholastica and on the CLR website and are free to read.

Suitable papers include anything materially pertaining to the intersection of Christianity (as outlined in the Apostles' and Nicene Creeds) and libertarian political economy.

All manuscripts will be blind-reviewed by at least two scholars. The Editorial Board consists of:

Norman Horn, PhD (General Editor)

Doug Bandow, JD

Gerard Casey, DLitt, PhD, LLM

Victor Claar, PhD

Kevin Gutzman, PhD, JD

Jeffrey Herbener, PhD

Jason Jewell, PhD

Robert Murphy, PhD

David Riggs, PhD

Shawn Ritenour, PhD

Charles Taliaferro, PhD

Timothy Terrell, PhD

Christopher Zoccali, PhD

For any questions, comments, or submissions, or to inquire about writing book reviews, contact General Editor Norman Horn at norman@LibertarianChristians.com.

For detailed submission guidelines, please see:

<https://christianlibertarianreview.com/submission-guidelines/>